

"The Italian American Writers Association" in "Via del Popolo" at the San Gennaro Feast

(September 13, 2012)

This year the "Via del Popolo: San Gennaro" initiative will turn Mulberry Street (between Prince & Houston Streets) into a simulated Italian town piazza experience for the celebration of art and culture.

The Italian American Writers Association [2] will have a presence this year for the first time at the historic San Gennaro Feast [3] as part of the Via del Popolo initiative. The "Via del Popolo: San Gennaro [4]" will turn Mulberry Street (between Prince & Houston Streets) into a simulated Italian town piazza experience for the celebration of art and culture. IAWA will host a special area for Italian-

American authors at Mulberry and Prince Streets to showcase their books for sale, their flyers and posters and to interact with festival-goers and share their passion for Italian-American literature. Co-Hosting the table is the Lt. Joseph Petrosino Lodge of the Order Sons of Italy In America.

This "innovative" concept for the Feast actually harkens back to the ancient Italian tradition of the Cantastorie, the 14th century professional street showmen who wandered from town to town during festival times performing sensational or tragic tales in public spaces. Traveling as they did, they typically also reported local news and stories of the region. IAWA, located during the feast in proximity to the church and other landmarked buildings, hopes to re-create the artistic, cultural spirit of those improvised ethnic street performances of the medieval poets and itinerant cantastorie, with entertaining discussions for visitors to the site.

IAWA was founded in 1991 to nurture the growth of a genuine community of Italian-American readers and writers and to give Italian-American writing a public forum where the full range of Italian-American expression can find a hearing. IAWA represents poets, essayists, playwrights, history and fiction writers whose work about their Italian roots is heartwarming, revelatory, sometimes shocking and, in many cases, downright hilarious.
