

Fashion in Matera, the European Culture Capital of 2019

In the ninth edition of Città dei Sassi Fashion Awards, an international competition for high fashion stylists, Sardinian designer Mara Piras came out on top in Matera.

The stunning town of Matera [2] lies in the heart of the Basilicata [3] region and has been celebrated by the intellectuals of the 60s by names such as Pier Paolo Pasolini [4] and Carlo Levi [5]. Americans might recognize its particular cavernous structures as the stage for bold films including The Passion of the Christ [6] by Mel Gibson [7]. Matera is not only a UNESCO [8] World Heritage Site but it already has been awarded the title for the European Capital of Culture 2019. Recently, the charming Piazza San Pietro Caveoso also hosted the runway that introduced the Città dei Sassi Fashion Awards [9].

The Message Behind the Show

The fashion show plus award show all in one is where sensuality, passion, originality, and internationality come together. The aim of the contest is to identify, valorize, and reward creative artists to discover emerging designers and professionals in the field of women's fashion and to enhance their talent in the splendid setting of the "Sassi" of Matera.

This year, the message of the show revolved around peace, equality, and integration among peoples without the distinction of race, color, and culture. The Città dei Sassi Fashion Awards teamed up with the Matera Cultural Workshop [10] and the African Fashion Gate Association [11] (AFG) which supports a social and cultural development program designed by Nicola Papparuso [12] and sponsored by the Ministry of Culture and Communication of Senegal [13]. The goal is to foster the social and cultural development of Africa through fashion and art. On Matera's special catwalk, AFG models were depicted as a symbolic bridge over to promote African models in the world and export their beauty while promoting intercultural dialogue, osmosis, and exchange of culture.
